A Shift Engineer at Station 170 in Appomattox, Hudson began work with Transco when it was just starting and he has seen it grow and change during the 30-year period of his employment. Married to the former Rebecca Johnson of Appomattox, they are the parents of a daughter, Patricia Lloyd Hudson.

Armentrout heads west

Jan Armentrout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Armentrout of Appomattox, is one of 36 girls from the Virginia Skyline Girl Scout Council who will go to Girl Scout National Center West and participate in the Wyoming Trek program.

Girl Scout National Center West is 15,400 acres of rugged wilderness located near Ten Sleep, Wyoming. The Center is one of three National Centers owned and operated by the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., but is the only one west of the Mississippi River. The land was purchased in 1968 from three sources - the Federal Government, the State of Wyoming, and private owners. It was the largest single land acquisition in Girl Scout History.

Girl Scout National Center West is a place where girls and adults of different backgrounds from all across the U.S.A. and many foreign countries can camp together in a primitive setting, learn about the vastness of the West, study its heritage and experience the beauty of unspoiled nature. There are canyons to explore, springs of pure water, and a huge natural rock amphitheater. Base camp is located at an altitude of 5,800 feet, and trails go as high as 8,000 feet. Sagebrush, juniper, ponderosa pine, aspen, and many varieties of wildflowers, dot the varied topography of the Center. Deer, elk, rabbits, prairie dogs, chipmunks, badgers, rattlesnakes, bullsnakes, beaver, ducks, and porcupines are all indigenous to the site.

This year, as in the past several years, Virginia Skyline Girl Scout Council has organized a group of 36 girls and 4 adults who will go to National Center West and participate in the Wyoming Trek Program. The group will spend a week at NCW taking part in the wide variety of programs offered. They will travel through Yellowstone, spend three days in the Grand Tetons and they will go river rafting. While traveling to and from NCW on a chartered bus, they plan to stop to see such sights as Chicago--The Badlands, Mount Rushmore, Salt Lake City and maybe St. Louis. The group will be gone from July 31 to August 16. 1980.

Corn farmers' chemical aid seen

Fred Duncan of Broad Run, board member of the National Corn Growers Association, says that increased fructose consumption could greatly improve the plight of Virginia corn farmers.

Duncan believes that liquid fructose, a sweetener made from corn, may be the answer to the serious problem of stored corn resulting from President Carter's Soviet grain embargo.

Duncan cites a report to the corn growers organization from Bruce L. Samlan, president of Batter-Lite Foods Inc. of Beloit, Wisconsin, the nation's leading fructose products distributor. In the report Samlan responded to the growing concern of farmers and corn handlers over their products that prior to the embargo were earmarked for overseas shipment. Samlan said that a greater switch from cane and beet sugar to fructose increase corn usage as a sweetner from the present 250 million bushels to over 850 million bushels per year. It could also improve this country's balance of payments problem since 45 per cent of our cane and beet sugar is currently imported, he added.

"Fructose is a naturally occurring substance found in fresh fruits, berries and honey, free of chemical additives," Salman said. "Furthermore, it is not surrounded by any cancer controversy as is saccharin, and it does not have saccharin's bitter aftertaste." He pointed out that a Finnish study showed a 60 per cent reduction in soft spots on teeth when fructose was totally substituted for sucrose in the diet.

Liquid fructose, or high fructose corn syrup as it is also called, is obtained from corn by distilling it from corn starch. Proponents stress its advantages over table sugar as a sweetening agent. Fructose is generally up to 1 ½ times sweeter than table sugar, so less is needed to obtain the same sweetness. As a result, the consumer can save on calories. In hot foods and beverages, the sweetness is about the same as sugar, but as the item cools, the sweetness actually increases.

"Fructose has been used by persons on weight loss diets and, because it provides longer lasting energy than sucrose (table sugar), athletes and exercise buffs have found it beneficial," Samlan said. "Fructose is also metabolized differently by the body, not requiring insulin initially. Consequently, controlled diabetics have been using it in their diets on a carbohydrate exchange basis. It may also be beneficial to pregnant women, the elderly, and women using birth control pills," he added.

Duncan reports that the National Corn Growers Association recently aroused wide public interest in fructose products when it carried out a major consumer education program in Omaha, Nebraska. The two-week promotion, funded by the Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board, included media interviews, presentations to medical and health personnel, consumer surveys, and in-store demonstrations. "Consumer response to the fructose program was remarkable," Duncan said. Customers virtually bought the stores out of the liquid sweetener, necessitating a special shipment from Beloit for re-supply. Duplication of the fructose program in other markets across the country is being considered.

Paul McClary returns from trip

Coast Guard Seaman Apprentice Paul A. McClary, son of Ann C. and James E. McClary Jr. of Route 4, Box 35A, Appomattox, Va., recently returned from a two-week Law Enforcement Patrol of the East Coast.

He is a crewmember aboard the Coast Guard cutter Reliance, homeported in Yorktown, Va.

During the patrol, the Reliance steamed more than 2,600 miles conducting surveillance operations to enforce international treaties and U.S. laws. The cutter assisted in the seizure of a fishing vessel loaded with 30 tons of marijuana, towed another fishing boat more than 100 miles to safety and patrolled a fisheries region involved in an international territorial dispute.

The Reliance is a 210-foot long, medium endurnace cutter with a crew of 61. It is the Coast Guard's only reserve cutter.

McClary joined the Coast Guard in April 1979. His wife, Doris, is the daughter of Thelma Hughes of Route 1, Box 86, also of Appomattox.
